Takuya is a student at Aozora University. Six months have passed since he started studying there. Once he had gotten used to life at the university and had more free time, he began thinking about starting a part-time job. So, he asked Jun, a third-year student at the same university, for advice. Jun was Takuya's teammate on the basketball team in high school, and they still play basketball together once a week at the university. Jun showed Takuya an article from the university newspaper that featured part-time jobs.

The article introduced popular part-time jobs among students at Aozora University and the average hourly wage for each job. Working at a café was the most popular job. According to the article, that was because many of the staff members who worked there were students from other universities, so they could make friends easily. The second most popular job was tutoring since the hourly wage was higher than wages at other jobs. As for Jun, he works part-time at a convenience store three days a week. He works late at night, so the hourly wage is high.

After considering his options, Takuya decided to start working part-time at a supermarket near his apartment. He has been able to get off to a good start. He sometimes gets tired of standing for long periods of time and carrying heavy objects, but thanks to the support of his co-workers, he thinks he will be able to continue working there. Takuya is currently working part-time once a week, but he is thinking of adding more days to his work schedule starting next month. He would like to save more money so that he can go to a driving school to get a driver's license in the near future.

1 According to the tables, which of the following is true?

- ① Hourly wages at convenience stores are the second highest.
- ② Restaurant staff is the least popular of all part-time jobs.
- ③ Twenty-five percent of the students do not have a part-time job.
- ④ One out of five students work part-time five to six days a week.

21

2 According to the passage, which of the following is true about Takuya and Jun?

- ① They have been helping edit newspapers since they started college.
- ② They became friends through their part-time jobs.
- ③ They both decided to work at the café near the university.
- ④ They have been playing basketball together since high school.

Kazu is an elementary school student. He likes sports very much, and he often goes to the park near his house to play soccer. He always has a good time when he goes there with his father on weekends. His father used to play soccer when he was a student, so Kazu can learn how to play it from him.

One Sunday afternoon, Kazu went to the park to play soccer with his father as usual. Suddenly, they heard a boy crying. Kazu's father walked up to the boy and asked him what happened. The boy could not answer easily because he was crying. Instead, he pointed up at the tree branches. There was a baseball in the branches. Kazu's father nodded silently, patting the boy's head. He tried to knock the baseball down with Kazu's soccer ball several times, but it was too high. Kazu could not understand why his father was trying so hard to help the boy. Kazu wanted his father to leave the boy and come back to play soccer with him.

Instead, Kazu's father decided to go home and get a ladder. Their house was very close to the park, so it would not take so long for his father to leave and come back to the park. However, Kazu became more upset because he felt this little boy was wasting his precious time with his father. Soon, his father came back with a long stick as well as the ladder. He put the ladder in front of the tree and reached the baseball on the branch using the long stick. This time, he managed to push the ball and it flew into the air.

As soon as it fell onto the ground, the boy rushed to it and held it tightly to his chest. Now, there was not a tear in his eyes, but rather a smile on his face. Looking at the boy, Kazu's father also had a smile on his face. Kazu finally understood why his father tried so hard. He watched the boy leaving the park with the ball. This experience taught Kazu that one can be happy by making others happy.

1 On weekends, Kazu enjoys 24

- ① learning how to play soccer from his father.
